

A crossover frequency between the sub and top audio signals is typically around 6 Hz. Smaart's real-time spectrum analyzer and time alignment software operate in a similar way. Smaart is a high-frequency signal measurement application and time alignment solution, designed to measure time alignment signals and quick-mover technology. . Smaart's universal spectrum analyzer measures the phase of multiple audio signals and provides real-time phase calibration between audio programs. time alignment using smaart Category:Digital signal processing Category:Audio engineering Category:Electronic circuits Category:DSPA second-grade girl was raped as she returned home from school, then she received a message on her cellphone from someone who said "don't tell anyone, I will kill you if anyone finds out" — but her parents didn't. Police in Winnipeg say the 19-year-old girl received the message on her cellphone July 13 in the early afternoon. It was written in lower case letters, which the Winnipeg Police Service says is indicative of someone who is "fearful, isolated, and needs help." "Someone told her to leave the property and get help, but she didn't leave," said Det. John Rutkowski in an interview with CBC News. "She ended up calling her parents at their work, and they were able to track her down." The girl's parents immediately called for help and arrived to pick her up a short time later. 'A better education is needed' Rutkowski said the girl then made a statement in which she told police what happened. The girl had just finished second grade at Woodrow Wilson elementary school. She told police that she and her friends were chatting on their cellphones when one of the friend's parents approached and asked if he could look at her cellphone. She said she gave him her cellphone, and it wasn't returned for more than two weeks. When he did return it, she realized that someone had written some text messages to her. The message said she was being raped. Rutkowski said the girl was "emotionally disturbed," "frightened and in a lot of pain." She was taken to a hospital, where she was examined and referred to family for counseling. The girl's cellphone was then handed over to police.
