If you want a real conversation starter, another point would be the carbon rear spoiler, which, from the rear view is less likely to be seen than the massive rear spoiler of the previous generation Boxster. We wouldn't want to disrespect the past by erecting a great big spoiler on the new car. The thing that probably most differentiates the 2014 Boxster from its predecessor is its engine. Boxster buyers come from various backgrounds. Even though a majority of them are BMW, Porsche, Mercedes and Audi purists, they also tend to be sports car buyers. In that context, it makes sense to have as balanced an engine as possible. Especially when you consider the fate of Porsche's old 944 engine. We won't be mentioning it again, ever. But this new nine-cylinder is no ordinary engine. Based on a twin-turbo unit that powers the current Cayenne SUV, it's a beautiful lump that will be very interesting to see in action. Under the bonnet is a single-turbo configuration producing 425 bhp or 515 peak horsepower, depending on which version you choose, which is below the estimated 620 or 660 bhp that the previous-generation car produced. But that's a lot of bhp at 650Nm of torque, so no wonder the 0-62 mph time was reduced to a mere 4.1 seconds. But the 991.2 is also a heavy car, which is why Porsche decided to use a smaller and lighter suspension, which in turn meant a stiffer and better handling chassis than the outgoing model. Pimp the twin-turbo V8 and you also get a 0-62 mph time of 4.7 seconds and acceleration of 0-100km/h in a reported 7.1 seconds. The 2013 and 2014 Porsche Boxsters have the same basic chassis. Their weight is almost identical, so we can safely say that a driver has to put in quite a bit of work to make the 2014 variant feel any different. And that's why the price of this Boxster is now closer to the top-range Cayenne Turbo. It's

This piece is truly exclusive and one of a kind. This collectors set includes our two newest Disney Motorcoach Collection figures, Walt Disney Animation Studios Pete and Jafar! Each motorcycle is unique and painted by hand so these collectibles each have their own unique color scheme and accents. Pete will be wearing his iconic fire helmet and his signature crimson cape while Jafar will be wearing a bright red version of his outfit, seen in Aladdin. Both Jafar and Pete were created in honor of our very own Mr. Walt Disney. Pete and Jafar are approximately 4 inches tall and stand on a base that plays a musical tune of sorts, fitting their true personalities. Pete is available separately and Jafar is a stand-alone figure that comes with an exclusive club chair base. 82138339de
